The amount of works shall be determined in accordance with the technical project and shall be included in the list of the amount of works.

(3) Technical specifications for public supply and service contracts shall determine the requirements brought forward for the necessary supplies and services. Public service contracts shall, in addition, determine the objective, methods and resources to be used (if necessary), as well as the end result of services. In technical specifications for public supply and service contracts technical descriptions shall be included in addition, which include such requirements specified by the commissioning authority in relation to the product or service as the level of quality, environmental protection provisions and climate change prevention promotion, construction requirements (also requirements in relation to availability to disabled persons), performance requirements, requirements for product use, safety rules, measurements, terminology, symbols, testing rules and methods, requirements in relation to the product name, under which it is sold, the packaging and labelling, instructions for user, manufacturing processes and methods, as well as the conformity assessment methods.

(5) If the commissioning authority prepares the technical specification in accordance with Paragraph four, Clause 1 of this Section, it shall not reject a tender because the products or services tendered do not conform to the standards or technical specifications indicated in the reference, if the tenderer can prove in a tender by means of the documentation, which the commissioning authority recognizes as acceptable (including technical documentation of the manufacturer or an attestation issued by an accredited institution in accordance with the procedures laid down in the laws and regulations regarding test results), that the tender is equivalent and satisfies the requirements of the commissioning authority defined in the technical specification.

(6) If the commissioning authority prepares the technical specification by determining the functional requirements or performance requirements, it shall not reject tenders, which comply to the European standards adapted in the status of Latvian national standard and European technical approvals, common technical specifications, other international standards, other technical reference systems established by European standardisation institutions, Latvian national standards or other technical reference systems, if these standards, technical specifications or reference systems determine the same functional or performance requirements, which have been set out by the commissioning authority. As another proof of conformity, the commissioning authority shall accept the documentation of the manufacturer or an attestation issued by an accredited institution regarding the test results.

(9) Technical specifications shall be prepared, taking into account the rules of availability to disabled persons, if it is necessary for a specific project.

(10) If it is not decisive for the existence of the subject-matter of the contract, technical specifications need not specify a specific origin, special process, brand, patents or specific types of products, which create advantages or a reason for rejection of certain suppliers or products. Such reference may be included in exceptional cases if it is not possible to prepare a sufficiently precise and clear description of the subject-matter of the contract in accordance with Paragraphs four and five of this Section. In such case the reference shall be used together with the words “vai ekvivalents” [or equivalent].

A negotiated procedure is a procurement procedure, in which the commissioning authority consults with the suppliers of its choice and negotiates the terms of the contract with one or several of them.

Section 62. Application of a Negotiated Procedure with Advance Publication of Notice Regarding the Contract

(1) The commissioning authority may apply a negotiated procedure with advance publication of a notice regarding the contract, if:

1) in an open or restricted procedure or in a competition dialogue tenders not conforming to the requirements specified in the procurement procedure documents have been submitted or if candidates or tenderers do not conform to the qualification requirements proposed by the commissioning authority and the provisions of the procurement contract do not significantly differ from the requirements necessary for the implementation of the contract provided for the previously published relevant procurement procedure. The commissioning authority need not publish the notice regarding the contract if it only invites all those tenderers to negotiations, which have not been excluded from the previously published relevant procurement procedure in accordance with the provisions of Section 39.¹ of this Law and conform to the qualification requirements to be met;

2) the subject-matter of the procurement is such services, particularly the services and intellectual services (for example, designing) referred to in Annex 2, Category 6 to this Law, the nature of which does not allow the requirements necessary for the implementation of the contract to be precisely estimated, and therefore it is not possible to select the most appropriate tender in an open or restricted procedure; or

3) the subject-matter of the contract is works and they are performed for the purposes of science, research or innovation without the aim of making a profit or recovering the costs associated thereto.

(1¹) If the commissioning authority applies a negotiated procedure in accordance with Paragraph one, Clause 2 of this Section, it shall indicate a justification for selecting the negotiated procedure in the notice regarding the contract or, if it is not possible, the justification shall be inserted on the website thereof not more than a day after the notice regarding the contract has been published.

(3) In the cases specified in Paragraph one of this Section the commissioning authority shall discuss the submitted tenders with the tenderers in order to co-ordinate them with the requirements, which are referred to in the notice regarding the contract and other procurement procedure documents, and to select the most conforming tender in accordance with the previously specified selection criterion for a tender.

[16 July 2009; 21 June 2012; 20 June 2013]

Section 63. Application of a Negotiated Procedure without Publication of a Notice Regarding the Contract

(1) The commissioning authority may apply a negotiated procedure for public works, supply and service contracts without advance publication of a notice regarding the contract, if:

1) tenders or applications for the selection of candidates have not been submitted for an open or restricted procedure published in advance. In such case the commissioning authority is not entitled to significantly change the intended requirements necessary for the implementation of a contract in a previously announced open or restricted procedure. Upon the request of the European Commission, the commissioning authority shall send the notice thereto;

2) due to technical or artistic reasons or due to reasons connected with the protection of exclusive rights, the contract may only be entered into with a specific supplier;

2) the commissioning authority needs additional supplies from the initial supplier (manufacturer) of goods in order to supplement or partly change the goods or equipment already at the disposal thereof because, upon selecting another supplier (manufacturer) of goods, the commissioning authority should have to procure goods, which would differ technically from those goods already at the disposal thereof and such difference would cause difficulties associated with the maintenance and operation of the goods or equipment. The period of validity of such contract, as well as a repeated contract shall not exceed three years;

3) the subject-matter of the contract is the supply of such goods, which are quoted and which the commissioning authority purchases on the commodity market;

4) there is an opportunity of purchasing goods on the basis of particularly advantageous provisions from the manufacturer of goods, which, when terminating its commercial activities, organises a sale, or from liquidators or administrators, which organise an auction of the property of a bankrupt merchant in accordance with regulatory enactments.

If several winners are specified in the design competition, all winners shall be invited to negotiations.

(4) In addition to the cases referred to in Paragraph one of this Section the commissioning authority may apply a negotiated procedure without advance publication of a notice regarding the contract to public works and service contracts, if:

1) the commissioning authority requires additional works or services, which were not initially included in the contract or building project, however, which have become necessary for the implementation of the contract previously entered into, due to unforeseen circumstances, and the following conditions are observed:

c) additional works or services cannot be technically or economically separated from the works or services provided for in the contract previously entered into, without causing significant difficulties to the commissioning authority, or also the additional works or services are significantly necessary for the implementation of the contract previously entered into, even though it is possible to separate them from the implementation of the works or provision of services provided for in this contract;

2) the subject-matter of the contract is repeated performance of works or provision of services provided for in the contract previously entered into as a results of an open or restricted procedure, which are entrusted to the implementer of this contract, and the repeatedly necessary works or services conform to the existing project at the basis of the contract previously entered into. This condition shall apply to cases when the commissioning authority, upon announcing the procurement procedure in the notice regarding the contract for the first project and determining the estimated contract price, has intended a repeated entering into of the contract and the total estimated value of the works or services. A negotiated procedure may be applied within three years from entering into the initial contract.

(2) All the interested suppliers may request the right to participate in a competitive dialogue. The commissioning authority shall consult with the selected suppliers in order to develop alternative solutions corresponding to the requirements, on the basis of which the selected candidates shall be invited to submit tenders.

(3) A contract shall be considered as particularly complex within the meaning of Paragraph one of this Section if at least one of the following criteria exists:
